

Join the Worldwatch Institute, the 11th Hour Project and Centre for Social Markets for a high-level discussion on the growing cooperation between India and the United States on climate change

Climate of Hope: the U.S.-India Connection

Fort Mason Center, Cowell Theater, San Francisco, CA
November 13, 2007, 2:00pm - 5:00pm

Program

Introduction:

Amy Rao,
President, 11th Hour Project

Speakers:

Yogi Deveshwar,
Chairman, ITC Ltd.

Christopher Flavin,
President, Worldwatch Institute

Vinod Khosla,
Founding Partner, Khosla Ventures

Malini Mehra,
Founder, Centre for Social Markets

B.S. Prakash,
Consul General of India

Jigar Shah,
Chief Technology Officer, Sun Edison

Please RSVP to events@11thhourproject.org or call Joe at 415.970.7090

About the event

Climate change is emerging as a major economic and energy security consideration in both the US and India. Neither country can address it adequately alone. This timely symposium will explore the growing cooperation between the US and India on climate change – and the need to work together as international efforts towards a Global Deal on climate change pick up pace over the next two years.

The goal of the event is to spur the rising leadership of India and the United States on clean energy, and to explore the economic advantages to be gained from pro-active climate change strategies in both nations.

If you are have an interest – or investments – in either the US or India, and wish to learn about the risks and opportunities presented by climate change, this is an ideal learning and networking opportunity. Come and hear from some of the key players in the debate, and share your own perspectives.

